Öppet brev till CSC@Waterloo j och jh

Greetings and good morning or good evening,

We are members of the LTU (Luleå University of Technology) student organization, computer society, logistics hub and mainframe: LUDD from Sweden. you might know us for our splendid events such as CClan, DLLan and of course Tacophaesten, if you would like to join Tacophaesten this year it is on the 7th of November, the url will be included later in this electronic-mail. During the last couple of days we have pulled several all-nighters each day and our Monster consumption has driven us down a rabbit hole like no other...

We demand access to the user page of the member knzarysk (<https://csclub.uwaterloo.ca/~knzarysk/smlinks.html>) as this man or woman has very valuable information to further our investigation down the rabbit hole... Like Alice we would like to descend down the spiral of madness and see what lies at the bottom. Should you fail to comply with our demands you will not be allowed to attend our world famous event Tacophaesten for 200 years. We may also send a few polar bears.

But if you follow up on our demands this could be the start of something beautiful, a collaboration between student organizations, universities and of course a friendship of a lifetime. We might even share a secret or two... for example our world famous cuisine: the double Billy's macka.

Ludd <https://ludd.ltu.se/>

Best regards,

Jim Agnevik and jh, perhaps even Bengtsson (A.K.A. toothless)

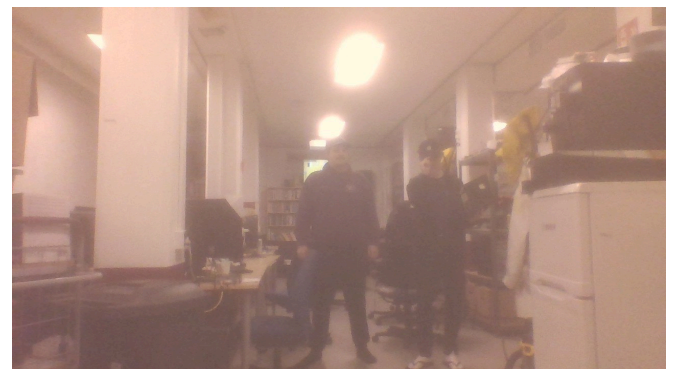

The reason for our urgent request is due to the very immediate danger that this unknowledge poses to our health and wellbeing. Please kindly respond within 2 to 3 business days (deadline this Sunday) or we might have fallen asleep despite the Monster within...

For strictly business related enquiries and questions about the safety of the Tormagotchi use referral code "XP-el" when you answer this email.

Bester regards,

Jim Agnevik and jh, perhaps even Bengtsson (A.K.A. toothless)

(LUDD is not responsible for any harm)

--- The Bastard Operator From LUDD E03 ---

I sit in the dark of DH3, considering whether seppuku or just jumping off A-huset's roof would be the best response to the mail server crashing again. Finding out that Ceph was the reason did not give me any more clarity on the decision, but it did serve to strengthen my resolve.

The ROOT team said, "Don't worry." "It's fine." "It's distributed and redundant storage, it can't get fucked."

Thinking on it, maybe a suicide bombing would be the way to go.

Either way, the distributed system did work—it's just that the eventual consistency it settled on was that no OSD knows the name, owner, or group of a single blob. Perfect consensus across 3 metadata servers that have achieved flawless, distributed ignorance. The next time Ceph duplicates an inode, I will duplicate the amount of times I throw the entire cluster off the roof, I mutter to myself.

After launching the metadata rebuild I settle back with some whiskey and get started on a new list of people whose servers are going to get a bad case of being smashed with a sledgehammer.

My phone pings.

"Why don't you just restore from backup?" a ROOT member asks in the recovery chat.

I start researching how hard it is to acquire anthrax. For legal purposes, this is a joke. For practical purposes, the dark web accepts Monero.

Printer on the DL skrivaransvariga

Skrivaren har vi burit med oss ett bra tag nu, den har varit våran sköld mot det stora skräckinjagande monstret som går under namnet "PaperCut" queue spooky music. Men som skrivaransvariga så måste vi meddela att den har hamnat i blåsväder och är i behov av lite underhåll och kanske ett hårdvarubyte `_ (ツ) _` så är lite WIP. Men det är något som vi aspar ska titta närmare på.

TLDR: Printer go beep boop, but paper no go out good.
